STAFF PICKS!

It should surprise no one to learn that we here at Small Changes read a lot of magazines. Equally unsurprising is the fact that we have opinions about those magazines. Below please find several of our favorites!

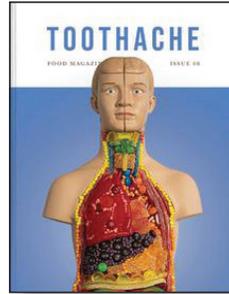

MARY

When I was growing up, my mother had no idea how to care for my curly hair. She brushed it into submission the best she could, but it wasn't until much later that I found someone who could treat my curls properly. That's why I have such a fondness for Curl magazine. From finding the right stylist to fighting frizz, and everything in between, Curl will inspire and enlighten those of us with curly tresses.

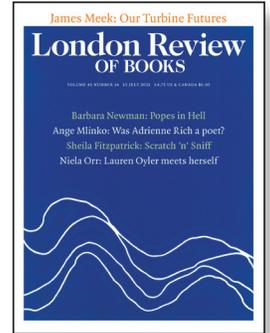

While most food magazines focus on home cooking, Toothache features recipes by, and interviews with, professional chefs. As someone who has worked in restaurants before, I find the creative process fascinating, and enjoy hearing how different chefs approach their craft. In addition, Toothache's gorgeous photography shows off the artful plating and styling found in fine restaurants worldwide.

IAN

I always find at least two articles in The London Review of Books that I know I want to read, but the true treasures are the five articles I find that I didn't know I wanted to read. Recent instances of the latter include a piece on the wars in Afghanistan - the title Like Ordering Pizza caught my eye - and one on a modern art museum in Iran.
